Alwyn Bennett at first glance and little to distinguish him from the average good looking young man about town. But a closer observer would have noticed a firmness about the shapely mouth, an honesty and strength of purpose about the eyes, a general air of latent power that lay unawakened beneath the jolly, purposeless exterior. No crisis had yet called forth any special manifestation of this power, and unaccountably Bennett was content to loaf through an existence that thus far had been decidedly pleasant. The only son of a widowed mother who advised and spoiled him, more than comfortably well off from the great fortune amassed by his dead father, possessed of a social position unassailable and, equally fortunate in that mysterious quality that spells popularity—all these gifts had saved Alwyn Bennett the trouble of fighting life's battle or showing who might be within his reach.

"Good old Bennett!" hailed Perry. "We were just talking about you."

Dallas Waterwright.

"Good," answered Alwyn. "Anything is better than indifference. What were you saying about me?"

"You tell him, Dallas," grinned the boy.

"Be quiet!" whispered his sister, flushing with vexation.

"Then I'll tell for myself," went on Perry gleefully. "I was just asking her—"

Seeing the girl's confusion, Bennett quickly changed the subject by interrupting:

"My mother will be over here in a few minutes, Dallas. She is bringing along a guest of ours, who says you and she were chums at school—Miss Garrison."

"Cynthia Garrison! Oh, I'll be ever so glad to see her again!"

"I know who she is!" cried Perry, refusing to be snubbed. "They say she's a gorgeous looker. When her tonal, Mrs. Under the hammer I bought in her two pet Boston terriers, Betty and Prince. Maybe that won't make me solid with her, eh? Well, I guess. All I ask is a start, and you'll find a whole lot of cripples slower than I'll be. If they're walking over I might wander out, sort of amiable-like and happen to meet 'em. Maybe that's a hum idea? Good old me!"

"Full of his Machiavellian scheme, the lad bolted through the long window and was gone."

"Dallas," began Bennett, without preamble, "you must surely know why I'm here today. You've seen that paragraph in the—"

"I have seen it," she answered quietly.

Taken aback by her manner, Bennett hesitated an instant; then asked nervously:

"The—the rumor isn't true, Dallas? Tell me if it is."

"Why shouldn't it be true?" she countered, perceiving, as though not wholly sorry to witness the new look her words called to his face. The look deepened as Bennett continued:

"You don't love Gibbs? Surely you don't love him?"

"I—"

The French windows swung wide, breaking off her reply.

CHAPTER II.

ALWYN BENNETT turned sharply toward the window, angry at the interruption, but Perry Waterwright, ushering two ladies in from the veranda, met his scowl with a wink of triumph.

"Not so bad, eh?" called the boy. "Met them as they were turning into the drive. You see?"

"Oh," observed the younger of the two women—a pretty, flower faced girl who since her entrance into the room had been engaged in exchanging delighted greetings with Dallas. "So you came to meet us? You said you just happened—"

"Did I?" asked Perry in deep amazement. "Well, well! The fact is, I wanted to do something startling in honor of meeting you, so I told my first lie."

"Don't mind him, Cynthia!" laughed Dallas. "He's taken that way quite often."

"Oh, it's his usual pace, then?" queried Miss Garrison innocently. "I thought perhaps he was just warning up."

"And now," pursued Dallas, taking possession of Cynthia, much to Perry's disgust, "tell me all about yourself. Have—"

"There isn't much to tell. But there's going to be. I'm going to work."

"Work? What for?"

"For a living, of course."

"Not really?"

"Yes, isn't it ridiculous?" broke in Mrs. Bennett, a sweet little old lady who now found her first chance to edge in a word amid the general volubility of talk. "But Cynthia is set on doing it."

"Why shouldn't I? I haven't a dollar, and there's a theory that one must live."

"But what are you going to do?" asked Dallas.

"I don't know. I have a pretty good education. I shall find something to do. Dallas, I think your brother is giving us a high sign of some sort."

"I am!" declared Perry. "I just wanted to tell you there's a surprise waiting for you. Two surprises in one. Want to see 'em?"

"What is he talking about?" queried Cynthia, appealing to Dallas for light on the mystery.

"About Betty and Prince Charlie," retorted Perry. "Your two Boston terriers that I bought. Want to see 'em?"

"Oh, the darlings! Of course I do. Where are they?"

"Come along and I'll show you. The darlings, eh? Talk like that makes me wish I was a dog."

"I can't despair," suggested Cynthia. "Maybe you'll grow."

Still puzzling vaguely as to the meaning of this cryptic utterance, Perry followed Miss Garrison from the room, a grin of untold ambition warring with his tamed face.

"To think of poor little Cynthia having to go to work!" sighed Dallas, looking after them. "One would as soon think of putting a butterfly into harness. Is it true she has no money left?"

"I'm afraid it's only too true," answered Mrs. Bennett. "Her father lost everything in speculating. He was cashier of the Israel Putnam Trust company and afterward president."

She paused as the office door opened and Thompson, the secretary, came into the room. At sight of Mrs. Bennett he seemed about to turn back; but, changing his purpose, crossed to the table and began to look for some documents he had failed to gather up.

"What was the rest of the story about Mr. Garrison?" asked Dallas, really interested in the older woman's recital.

Thompson's papers slipped through his fingers and went skidding across the polished floor. The others looked around in surprise.

"Excuse me!" muttered the secretary as he stooped to gather up the documents. "Very awkward! I'm sorry."

He went on arranging the scattered papers in his usual unobtrusive silence, affecting himself from the general talk.

"You were telling me about Cynthia's father," said Dallas.

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Bennett, taking up the thread of her tale. "He was looked on as one of the most honorable bankers in the city. And so he was until his misfortune."

"Misfortune?"

"More misfortune than crime. His wife was a girlhood friend of mine, so perhaps I am prejudiced in his favor. A famous financier—a dear friend of his—induced him to make a very large loan that proved to be a mistake. He went to the treasurer for advice as to how to recoup the loss. The financier told him of an investment by which he could get all the money back without any risk and could make good the loan. Mr. Garrison took his advice, used the bank's funds for the purpose, and the investment proved worthless. The bank was insolvent. Mr. Garrison shot himself."

"Horrible! Horrible!" murmured Dallas.

"The horrible part of the whole story came out later," said Alwyn Bennett. "It seems the financier had deliberately ruined Mr. Garrison and was on the other side of the deal by which the bank's funds were lost. In other words, he persuaded his friend to put money in what he knew was a losing venture, then took that money himself."

"He did it willfully," chimed in Mrs. Bennett. "Knowing his friend would be ruined and that the bank's money which he hired Mr. Garrison into investing was going to swell his own ill-gotten fortune."

"I did not think any one lived who could do such things," shuddered Dallas. "Poor Cynthia!"

"Cynthia suffered least of all," said Mrs. Bennett. "She was little more than a child at the time. Her mother died of grief, and her brother—a promising, clever young fellow just entering college—disappeared."

"Deserted Cynthia?"

"Not so bad as that. He probably went away sooner than face his father's disgrace and began life some where far from home. That was nine years ago, yet ever since then he sends Cynthia a little money every month—not much, but no doubt all he can scrape together above his bare living expenses. She has tried in every way to get in touch with him, but she can't locate him anywhere. There is no clew except that monthly money order. I never knew him very well—in fact, I only saw him once or twice—but I've heard he was a fine, manly boy. The shock must have been worst of all on him."

"So a man lost his good name and his life, his wife died, his son's life was wrecked and his daughter impoverished," mused Dallas, "and all that a financier might grow a little richer. I can't believe it!"

A little ashamed of displaying such vehemence in the presence of one of her uncle's dependents, the girl glanced toward the table. But the secretary had gone.

"My husband," prattled Mrs. Bennett complacently, "always said that the men who rose highest in the money world reached their lofty places over the despoiled bodies of hundreds of victims. Thank God, my boy has no such mental tendency to look back on his husband was one man in a million—the soul of honor both in business and in private life. You've read of his splendid civil war record. Then he went into business as a contractor and engineer and earned a fortune, every dollar of it was honest. That's something to be proud of in these money loving days."

"What was the name of the financier who ruined Mr. Garrison?" asked Dallas, still haunted by the narrative she had just heard.

"No one knows. It was suppressed at the time. The facts in the written confession left by Mr. Garrison became public property; but, through political influence, the name of the man responsible for the tragedy was suppressed. Here I sit chatting on idle topics, while those two young people are running all over the place unchaperoned. Excuse me, won't you, and I'll look them up!"

WOLFE COUNTY.

Campton.

Henry Lindon (col.), of Daysboro, was brought before Esp. S. F. Allen, of this place, Thursday of last week, charged with the murder of Desko Adams. He was released upon an examination of the charge by the court. A large number of Campton's candidates for county offices, as well as a number of their friends, attended the funeral meeting on Gilmore last Sunday. G. W. Sally, of Stillwater, was in town Monday on business. G. B. Stamper, county attorney, attended Esp. Hollon's court, on Holly, last Friday. Prof. E. E. Whiteside has resigned his position as principal of K. W. A. and Prof. G. C. Allen has been appointed in his place. George Center, of Stillwater, and Oia Miller, of Devil's Creek, went to Lexington last week and entered Kentucky State University. Mort Barker, of Rocky Branch, in this county, while in town last Saturday night, was shot through the neck by some one concealed in the shade of Canoy's livery stable. It is not known who did the shooting, as Barker had no known enemies. It is thought that he will recover, though the wound is a dangerous one. The oil well drilled by Marshal & Spencer, on the Ward Watson farm, proved to be a dry well. This firm will at once begin drilling on the G. W. Lovelace place, on Stillwater, where they already have their derrick completed. Born, to the wife of James Reynolds, on September 5, a boy; to the wife of Rev. J. M. Our Position.

THE BREATHITT COUNTY NEWS has always been and is now an independent newspaper and as such has always supported the candidates for office that it deemed to be to the best interests of the people to have elected. It has always fought for the rights of the people and against political machines and has seen the people win and the machine smashed.

We believe it to be to the best interests of the people to have the Democratic ticket elected from Brynn to Stamper, and we believe that it is the duty of every citizen who believes that "the people shall rule" to vote that ticket from top to bottom. The News is going to support that ticket and will give its readers from time to time its reasons therefor.

As for the National race we need not give it much concern as the State will go safely Democratic anyway, and as for the Congressional race the people will fare well under either Davis or Langley, but in the races in this judicial district it is very different. The present incumbents are the Republican nominees, who, we believe, have clearly shown their inability to cope with the situation, as very few convictions for crime have been had and very little business done under their administration. On the other hand the Democrats have nominated men of ability and experience, for their offices, who when elected will be able to hold our courts and prosecute our criminals and probably convict some of them.

Let's elect White and Stamper this year and if they don't do better than the present incumbents let the offices go vacant next year.

Remember the Recital.

Remember the recital at the college chapel this (Friday) evening at 7:30 sharp. The program is an interesting one and will repay attendance. Admission free.

Their Game is Known.

The schemes of a few short sighted politicians to traffic for votes in the judicial race, through promises to get pardons for friends and other official favors of a similar kind are well known, but will fail in results. Such use of official position or attempted use, is a low prostitution of office and seems to be openly resorted to at present. It should be closely watched by every honest voter, and so overwhelmingly rebuked in November that it will never be attempted again. Let the voters see to it that such traffic in official position be condemned.

Judge J. B. White.

The office of Circuit Judge is one of the gravest importance to the people. It should be filled by the best lawyer in the district. Next in importance to the security of human life is the protection in the rights of property. All of these questions are by law decided in the circuit courts. The framers of the Constitution, ripe in their experience, wisely foresaw that only lawyers of wide experience were capable of properly filling this position, and to safeguard the people in the trial of their property rights, fixed a minimum age for Circuit Judges at thirty-five years. This was to prevent the elevation to this office of inexperienced judges. As far as it was able by general terms the Constitution has attempted to secure for the citizens judges of wide experience in the law and ripe judgment. To this it added a requisite of eight years practice. It does not mean eight years of holding the license of an attorney. It means what it says—eight years of actual practice of the law.

In Judge J. B. White the Democrats offer a lawyer whose active practice covers a period of years almost equal to the life of his opponent. He has been a success as a lawyer. His reputation as a lawyer is not confined to this district but is co-extensive with the State. It even takes the scope of a national reputation. That reputation is the reputation of a lawyer of brilliant attainments, of indefatigable energy and indomitable courage. Add to this a reputation unquestioned as to personal integrity and you have the Democratic candidate. Should there be a moment's hesitation as to whom you will vote for this fall? Vote for White and you will be voting for your own interests and the best interests of the country.

Ministers Appointed.

The Conference of M. E. Church South, held at Middlesborough made the following appointments for this district: Rev. E. L. Southgate, presiding elder and the following pastors: Jackson, T. R. Cooke; Campton, J. M. Matthews; Hazel Green, W. R. Green; Irvine, J. A. Gossett; Hindman, W. R. Fryman; Clay City, R. M. Bush; Rev. W. W. Green, who has been pastor here for the past two years, was transferred to Hickman in the Frankfort District. He left here Thursday with his family to take charge of the work with the best wishes of his many friends here.

An Expensive Term.

The special session of the circuit court adjourned here yesterday after a session of nearly five weeks. Although it cost the State probably more than any court ever held here, very little business was done. Only two were convicted to the penitentiary, one of whom confessed. Only three civil cases were tried by the jury. The juries were held 22 days, yet some of the jurors did not sit in any case for more than two weeks of the time. The jurors were not in fault, however, because they did not have the opportunity.

It took eight days to dispose of a motion for a change of venue in the Beech Hargis case, at a cost to the State of $391.01 in witness fees alone, when one day would have been sufficient to have recognized them to appear at Irvine. During the same time several other cases were hanging on at a heavy expense to the State.

With a continuous session of court in this county at the rate the cases have gone off at this term it looks like our docket would be crowded after a ten days session.

The Unwritten Law.

The examining trial of Ruck Cottongame, who killed Parish Arnett, Jr., was held at Hamilton, O., last week and he was held over to circuit court without bail.

The so-called "unwritten" law will be urged in the defense of Cottongame. This announcement was made by lawyer U. F. Bickley after consultation with Cottongame. Cottongame claims that Arnett invaded his home and terrorized him. This defense has never been specifically urged before an Ohio jury, it is said.

NOTICE!

ON and after September 15, 1908, Crawford & Co. store, of Jackson, Ky., will conduct their mercantile business on a strictly spot cash and produce plan only. No doubt some may take exception to such a radical change, but our judgment tells us that we can serve a greater number of people to better advantage, and at a less cost, than we can by the credit system. Call and test our new plan. We firmly believe you will be entirely satisfied, and we know to a certainty that we can sell you goods cheaper than any credit concern can or will undertake to do. We are determined from this date on that no expense caused by a credit system shall be a burden upon our customers. A cash system once established can do the honest people more good than any credit concern ever did or ever will. Respectfully yours—
